OPEN Design Collaborative in Partnership with Remail Modern to Show Integral Man

OPEN Design Collaborative is partnering with Remail Modern to show Integral Man. The film tells the story of Jim Stewart and his home, Integral House, designed by Shim-Sutcliffe Architects.

Jim Stewart is the most published mathematician since Euclid, a concert level violinist, calculus professor, philanthropist, and gay rights activist. He is a true polymath, a modern day renaissance man. He had a bold vision and the conviction to follow through. It took almost ten years to realize his dream, Integral House, which was completed in 2009. Designed around a stunning internal concert hall, it was hailed as a masterpiece by some of the greatest architecture and design critics in the world. Integral House, like Jim, was unlike anything else. Now confronting his inability to play violin as arthritis cripples his hands, Jim boldly faces his declining health, jumping head long into the role of impresario. But it would not be so simple. As unexpected events unfold, Jim is left to make some of the most difficult decisions of his life.

When: Friday November 17, 2017, 7:00 pm

Where: Sasktel Theatre, Remail Modern, 102 Spadina Crescent East

Cost: Museum Admission

Integral Man is part of the tri-city Architecture+Design Film Series in conjunction with RAD and the Winnipeg Architecture Foundation, and made possible by the Canada Council for the Arts. OPEN Design Collaborative is proud to present the series in partnership with Remail Modern.
